Wearing Your Rubbers.

How to clude your wife when she insists that you positively must wear your rubbers when you go out:

"We have been distaired recently by symptoms in the body politic which are not healthy. Certain men, not many in number, have thought more of the lands of their birth than of First.—Tell her you positively will not do it. This will produce in her an attitude of resignation, and she will almost forgive you for not wearing solutely incompatible with the idea of

there for giving her a chance to act the role of a martyr.

Second—Say that you never wore rubbers before you were married. She will then tell you that you were always sick, too, and will work herself into a jovial glow by thinking what good care she is taking of you.

Third.—Wear the rubbers to keep peace in the family.—Judge.

Japan's Gulf. Stream.

The sea currents which flow along both coasts of Japan consist of a warmer current coming from the south and a colder one from the north. The former is the Knroshio, or Black current, which takes its rise hear the equator, being produced by the Pacific trade wind. It is so called from its color, which is deep indigo in fine weather, though asby pale on cloudy days. The colder currents are the Oyashio and the Okhotsk, the former of which originates in the vicinity of the peningula of Kamchaika and the latter near, the mouth of the Amur river. America has become, from the physical point of view, one of the most powerful nations in the world, a Nation which, if it took the pains to do so, could build that pow-er up into one of the most formidable most formidable instruments of force, but which has no other idea than to use its force for ideal objects and not for selfish aggrandizement.

Liberty, Justice, Purity. This process of Americanization which America represents and is proud to represent. And it takes a great deal more courage and steadfastness, my fellow-citizens, to represent ideal things than to represent anything else.

"It is easy to lose your temper and hard to keep it. It is easy to strike and sometimes very difficult to refrain from striking, and I think you will agree with me that we are most justified in being proud of doing the things that are hard to do and not the things that are easy.

"You do not settle things quickly by taking what seems to be the quick-est way to settle them. You may make the complication just that much the more profound and inex-tricable, and, therefore, what I believe thing else is the sovereignty of thoughtfulness and sympathy and vision as against the grosser impulses of mankind. No nation can live with-out vision, and no vision will exalt a and real justice and purity of conduct."

The word baffled now has a meaning entirely different from that applied to it 300 years ago. It is now understood to mean thwarted, foiled or disappoint ed, but then it was applied to the process of degradation by which a knight was disgraced. A baffled knight was one who had been pronounced guilty one who had been pronounced guilty of conduct unbecoming one of his order and had accordingly been shorn of his plumes, his sword was broken before his eyes, his knightly robe torn away; his spurs cut off with a cleaver, and after being publicly chastised he was declared to be baffled. The word is used in this sense by Shakespeare and other writers of that time.

Hajiway Car Wheels.
Everybody knows how the wheels of a railroad car are fastened to the axle. They are shrunk on—that is, put on hot and allowed to shrink in cooling so that they are practically a solid piece with the axle. These cars go around curves, and it will be observed that the outer rail covers a great deal more ground than the inner one, so that to turn the curves and finish even the outside wheel must of necessity travel considerably faster than the inner one. Yet it is fixed solidly to the axle and cannot make a fraction of a revolution more than the other one, yet the axle remains intact, and the curves are passed with untiring regularity.

"My daughter," says the first mother proudly, "is the most popular girl in town. Why, we counted them up one day, and she has no less than fifty-three gentlemen admirers. Isn't that splendid! It must seem so very different to have a daughter like your
